

After independence

After India's independence in 1947, Mangalore which was a part of the Madras Presidency was merged into a unified in 1956. Thereafter, Mangalore gained a very important position in the state since it gave the erstwhile Mysore state the benefit of a coastline. The late twentieth century witnessed Mangalore develop as a business and commercial centre. In spite of this, Mangalore still retained its old world charm such as tile-roofed buildings amidst groves,

Mysore State

coconut

fishing

boats

silhouetted against the darkening skyline. The present day city bustles with great activity in the upcoming and the prognosis of a prosperity in this international trade looms.

IT Sector

18

1